Thomas Safran & Associates completed this 42-unit community in Inglewood, California in 2023 and it includes one of our Fort Jefferson structures for the kids. Despite its compact size, the Jefferson wooden play structure offers an extensive array of activities to keep energetic children engaged and entertained. From a rock climbing wall and slide to a tunnel, rope net climb, fire fighter pole, and ship's wheel, there's no shortage of options for active youngsters to explore.

The diverse climbing opportunities not only provide fun but also encourage the development of strength, coordination, and determination in a joyful play environment. The rock climbing wall, equipped with professional-grade hand holds, presents a thrilling challenge that motivates children to push their limits while maintaining a suitable distance between holds to prevent frustration. The rope net climb offers a different type of challenge because kids must adapt to the wobbly rope, which helps them develop their coordination and balance.
